Highlighting Student Work and Campus Leadership in Sustainable Landscapes

During 2016 Fall Semester, students working for the Campus Arboretum began working on a new project: integrating a wide variety of plants located in and around the ENR2 building into the Arboretum's database. Although each new landscape must be inventoried so that the site can be systematically and responsibly managed, this particular new landscape offered many additional opportunities for student learning.

In the course of just 6 months students produced an array of new educational resources for the campus and community by completing plant identification, mapping, production and installation of new signage, capture of botanical photography, and reserach of species descriptions as well as creation of a new mobile tour that
