The Students Are Back!

Student engagement and mentoring have always been a hallmark of the Campus Arboretum. As a University, our priority is to communicate knowledge that inspires students to make a difference. The UA Campus Arboretum not only provides a laboratory for active student engagement in a diverse array of classes but also directly provides student employment and practical experience by mentoring student projects. We strive to provide practical experience, nurture passion and depth of character that propels civic leadership. By combining our educational mission with this extension program, we supplement classroom learning and train generations of students who will become future leaders prepared to advocate for tree conservation and stewardship. Poetry Readings Resume

"Poetry is the food of the spirit, and spirit is the instigator and flow of all revolutions." Ruth Stephan, University of Arizona Poetry Center founder.

Through partnership with the University of Arizona Poetry Center, we aim to harness the power of poetic language to expand appreciation for urban trees and to provide experiences for campus residents and visitors that transform their attitudes and ability to advocate for urban tree stewardship and conservation.
