The Arizona

VIRTUAL Plant Festival

Have you felt that now, perhaps more than ever, our world needs the environmental, economic and social well-being that plants provide? In Arizona and throughout the world, climate change, population growth and, urbanization are distancing us from both the benefits of plants and our important roles as plant stewards. As the Campus Arboretum celebrates the diverse geographic, environmental, cultural and historic roots of Arizona, we have now bring to you the first Annual Arizona Plant Festival.

The festival includes more than 50 exhibits organized into thematic areas which feature diverse ways plants and people are intertwined. These exhibits will remain for one year allowing you to return often for ideas and inspiration. Furthermore, beginning this Saturday Nov. 14th you will find a selection of interactive exhibits that reflect key groups and locations across the state which embody many of the festival's themes. They are not only informative, but visually delightful! I hope you'll take a look, spend some time, learn, and ultimately, feel empowered to take action to enhance the world within your reach.
